The aim of all morality is the sanctification of life, in other words, the perfect moralization of human society. We have seen that the purpose and aim of every moral endeavor is morality pure and simple, nothing external to, nothing beside morality. We must now proceed to distinguish the elements in the notion of holiness by which the aim of morality expresses itself. 176. In general terms, sanctification means a serious and profound view of life. Many things are important, holy things are the most important. Whatever is good and valuable we regard as inviolable; what is holy, as the most inviolable at all. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
